

NORWICH BULLETIN and Courier

126 YEARS OLD

Printed every day in the year except Sundays.
Subscription price $10 a week; $30 a month; $5.00 a year.
Entered at the Postoffice at Norwich, Conn., as second-class matter.
Postoffice No. 100.
Published at the Norwich Bulletin Co., 100 State St., Norwich, Conn., U.S.A.
Norwich, Wednesday, Nov. 8, 1922.

CIRCULATION
WEEK ENDING NOV. 4th, 1922
11,865

THE NORTH STREET CROSSING.

Much interest is bound to be attached to the efforts that have been set in motion by the board of common council in behalf of better protection at the grade crossing at North street, where the life of the head of a family was recently snuffed out, where others have had narrow escapes and where there are conditions which make it a decidedly bad place for users of the highway.

It is one of those blind crossings that make it impossible for anyone going east to get a view of the track and in only one direction can those going west see an approaching train.

Located at the foot of a sharp grade the driver of a vehicle of any kind has his troubles in bringing his team or machine to a stop after turning in from North Main street where though he is warned of approaching danger by the crossing tender, for those going west it is natural to step on the gas just before crossing the track in order to make the grade immediately on the other side.

It is well, and it is time, that it was established whether conditions at that point are what can be reasonably considered safe, with the chances are that even the careful drivers are taking at such times as the crossing tender may be absent. There is in fact a potential danger at all the crossings from North street south where it seems as if some positive measures should be taken to safeguard those who have to use them.

From such a report as the committee signed to investigate makes it ought to be possible to determine whether the right solution for the North street crossing is an overhead bridge or an effective signal that will actually warn the highway users at times when the flagman is off duty.

Those who insist upon drivers stopping their machines before negotiating any of the private crossings to the south of North street are doing the wise thing. The bad grade at North street makes it difficult to follow that plan. Adequate signals should prevent accidents while a bridge would eliminate them entirely.

REDEMPTION WAR BONDS.

When this country put forth its Liberty bond issues there were many thousands of people who invested in government bonds who had never done so before. They regarded it as a patriotic duty, and it was. Likewise it was considered a gift-ed investment and there is no question but what it was. Only those who have been unable to hold them as an investment has been obliged to sacrifice on them.

But because of the fact that many are not familiar with the details involved in the handling of such securities it seems probable that there will be those who will lose certain interest because of their own negligence. As to the principal there is of course no question.

For instance it is or should be known that the Victory notes bearing 3 1/2 per cent interest were called for redemption last June. The date on which they were called for redemption is the date on which the interest payment ceases. It is of course possible to hold the bonds as long as one pleases with the assurance that the face value will be paid by the government but the interest on them has stopped.

In other words it is long since time to collect and put the money elsewhere at interest.

There are other Victory notes which call for 4 1/2 per cent interest and certain of these have been called for redemption December 15, meaning that interest will not be paid after that date and that the full amount can be collected from the government through the banks at that time.

Notice of redemption is sufficient for those who are familiar with the handling of bonds. It is for those who are not that attention is now being called to the matter. They do not desire, in all probability, to lose any interest money and they will not if they surrender their bonds in accordance with the government notices of redemption, concerning which the banks are always glad to furnish information.

WHAT THEY WANTED

"Well, your heart's desire is granted," the complaisant husband announced as he carved the steak. "I said this house today, Catalpa! I found a buyer who didn't mind at all that it is so big and such a care and who didn't seem to give a whoop for the servant question!"

"Holabird!" gasped the graceful wife, dropping her napkin and staring at him with distracted eyes. "Do you mean to say you have sold the house over our heads and that we are homeless? That this place isn't ours any longer?"

"I declare!" the complaisant husband declared in great surprise. "I thought when I broke the glad news you would burst into grateful tears and hurl yourself upon my neck! You've been saying three times a day for the last five years now! Why did we could get rid of this place, we could get along with two less bedrooms and then it was such a long old thing and you had to walk miles to get from the front room to the second floor and the kitchen."

"But you needn't have been so abrupt about it," the graceful wife said tremulously, fishing for her handkerchief. "You might have taken more time and let us think it over! Why, there are so many things to be considered! I think it is just awful of you to have done such a thing. Holabird! You never even telephoned!"

"Gee!" said the astounded small son. "Have we gotta move? What'll the baseball club do without me and I'm the captain and everything? An' I just got my workbench fixed up down in the basement!"

"I can't be hearing a thing," the complaisant father remarked, shaking his head at his child. "Only last Sunday you said 'Gee, wouldn't it be nice to live over on the north side next the park where Artie lives!'"

"I never heard anything more dreadful," the daughter of the house broke in tragically, having got her breath at last. "It does seem to me you might have considered the rest of the family a little bit instead of just yourself! Because you want to move is no reason for tearing us all up! Why, nobody in the world will ever come to see me now! Why, I've just met that perfectly grand Lemuel Artichoke, and he is right around the corner, and he has just formed the habit of sort of dropping in every night, and it isn't!"

"Really, you amaze me, Tapoca," the complaisant father repeated her mildly. "Ever since your best friend, Margerite, moved over to the north side, I have heard nothing except the utterly grand location Margerite now lived in and how nice it was to feel oneself surrounded by one's own class, instead of living in such a hit-and-miss locality as this did. You said you were just ashamed to have the girls meet here for the card club, and it was so unprogressive never to move, and that when we did move and get in a decent place you were going to get an enameled bedroom set with the money grandfather sent you, and that you were just sick of this old place, anyway!"

"I am sure I never made any such remarks," his daughter told him firmly and aggressively. "You just imagined things! Of course I said I might like to move in time, but there is no sense rushing things and Lemuel gets home so late from his office that if I were on the north side he never in the world would come over!"

"I am sure I never made any such remarks," his daughter told him firmly and aggressively. "You just imagined things! Of course I said I might like to move in time, but there is no sense rushing things and Lemuel gets home so late from his office that if I were on the north side he never in the world would come over!"

"I am sure I never made any such remarks," his daughter told him firmly and aggressively. "You just imagined things! Of course I said I might like to move in time, but there is no sense rushing things and Lemuel gets home so late from his office that if I were on the north side he never in the world would come over!"

"I am sure I never made any such remarks," his daughter told him firmly and aggressively. "You just imagined things! Of course I said I might like to move in time, but there is no sense rushing things and Lemuel gets home so late from his office that if I were on the north side he never in the world would come over!"

"I am sure I never made any such remarks," his daughter told him firmly and aggressively. "You just imagined things! Of course I said I might like to move in time, but there is no sense rushing things and Lemuel gets home so late from his office that if I were on the north side he never in the world would come over!"

"I am sure I never made any such remarks," his daughter told him firmly and aggressively. "You just imagined things! Of course I said I might like to move in time, but there is no sense rushing things and Lemuel gets home so late from his office that if I were on the north side he never in the world would come over!"

"I am sure I never made any such remarks," his daughter told him firmly and aggressively. "You just imagined things! Of course I said I might like to move in time, but there is no sense rushing things and Lemuel gets home so late from his office that if I were on the north side he never in the world would come over!"

"I am sure I never made any such remarks," his daughter told him firmly and aggressively. "You just imagined things! Of course I said I might like to move in time, but there is no sense rushing things and Lemuel gets home so late from his office that if I were on the north side he never in the world would come over!"

"I am sure I never made any such remarks," his daughter told him firmly and aggressively. "You just imagined things! Of course I said I might like to move in time, but there is no sense rushing things and Lemuel gets home so late from his office that if I were on the north side he never in the world would come over!"

"I am sure I never made any such remarks," his daughter told him firmly and aggressively. "You just imagined things! Of course I said I might like to move in time, but there is no sense rushing things and Lemuel gets home so late from his office that if I were on the north side he never in the world would come over!"

THE ELECTION RESULT.

In an election which has been unusually close for Connecticut, results at a late hour make it evident that the republican ticket has been successful throughout the state, that Senator McLean has been re-elected to Washington, along with the five congressmen from this state, and that Lieutenant Governor Templeton has been raised to the chief executive's chair, together with the remainder of the state ticket and a republican general assembly.

It was an election in which democratic pressure was brought to bear in the cities and there it is that democratic support was gained in most of the large centers of the state.

Locally, the apathy which had been indicated in the republican ranks and the well organized opposition gave a democratic victory ranging from the average of nearly three hundred majority to the 61 by which Lee Roy Robbins was beaten in the senatorial contest. There was evidence that the feeling displayed in the last June election had not entirely disappeared.

Locally, in the state and throughout many of the states there was manifested that departure from the tremendous majority that was rolled up the presidential election two years ago. It was a change that was anticipated but in getting back more nearly to normalcy there were likewise some surprises.

In Connecticut democratic hopes have been dashed. It was believed to be a year when they could win. The state has, however, endorsed the service rendered by its representatives in congress and spoken for the continuance of that type of businesslike state government which it has been experiencing. Connecticut has done better than those from without had been estimating it could do.

NINE HORRORS.
It is always interesting to note the progress that is being made in connection with mine safety. Constant efforts are being made to improve the situation below the surface, to eliminate recognized dangers, to anticipate others and to increase the effectiveness of those who undertake rescue work when accidents have happened and there exists the chance to still save human life.

Nevertheless regardless of what has happened there are still too many instances where fires, cave-ins or blasts result in deplorable mine horrors, causing large losses of life and no end of misery. This only gives emphasis to the fact that regardless of what is being done and what is contemplated there is still room for much greater improvements. All that has been done so far has not overcome the possibility of mine accidents, and there is no reason to expect that it will. The best that can be hoped is that it will reduce the needless waste of life and eliminate those cases where it is evident preventive work is possible.

What progress is being made in dealing with such matters is indicated by the manner in which just such rescue work was carried in the recovery of the trapped and injured, following the explosion in the colliery at Spangier, Pa. There it was possible to employ the rescue squads to better advantage than it was in the recent mine fire in California. Conditions were decidedly different but it all accentuates the importance of preventive measures and work in anticipation of such accidents as can be expected to occur.

The situation is much better today than it was a quarter of a century ago but there still remains plenty of room for improvement and efforts are happily being directed to that end whenever there is that needed cooperation between mine owners and the federal bureau of mines.

RITUAL NOTES.
There is always the day after as well as the day before.

The man on the corner says: This is the day of explanations and the day when bets are due.

You can get the explanation today whereas it wouldn't have been possible to drag it forth yesterday.

In adopting black instead of red shirts the fascists certainly do not intend to be taken for firemen.

Every week-end adds to the number of auto fatalities, and there are some who do not wait for week-ends.

The fellow who has stopped cutting his lawn is probably counting the days till it will be necessary to wield the snow shovel.

"Others wanted Kaiser," says Princess Hermine. Probably, but nothing compared with what a great number did a few years ago.

It seems the allies have been putting greater reliance in the Turkish nationalists than they were justified in doing by past experience.

San Johnson wants to strike a blow at one form of gambling. He should get that great volume of support which any such effort deserves.

WHAT THEY WANTED

"Well, your heart's desire is granted," the complaisant husband announced as he carved the steak. "I said this house today, Catalpa! I found a buyer who didn't mind at all that it is so big and such a care and who didn't seem to give a whoop for the servant question!"

"Holabird!" gasped the graceful wife, dropping her napkin and staring at him with distracted eyes. "Do you mean to say you have sold the house over our heads and that we are homeless? That this place isn't ours any longer?"

"I declare!" the complaisant husband declared in great surprise. "I thought when I broke the glad news you would burst into grateful tears and hurl yourself upon my neck! You've been saying three times a day for the last five years now! Why did we could get rid of this place, we could get along with two less bedrooms and then it was such a long old thing and you had to walk miles to get from the front room to the second floor and the kitchen."

"But you needn't have been so abrupt about it," the graceful wife said tremulously, fishing for her handkerchief. "You might have taken more time and let us think it over! Why, there are so many things to be considered! I think it is just awful of you to have done such a thing. Holabird! You never even telephoned!"

"Gee!" said the astounded small son. "Have we gotta move? What'll the baseball club do without me and I'm the captain and everything? An' I just got my workbench fixed up down in the basement!"

"I can't be hearing a thing," the complaisant father remarked, shaking his head at his child. "Only last Sunday you said 'Gee, wouldn't it be nice to live over on the north side next the park where Artie lives!'"

"I never heard anything more dreadful," the daughter of the house broke in tragically, having got her breath at last. "It does seem to me you might have considered the rest of the family a little bit instead of just yourself! Because you want to move is no reason for tearing us all up! Why, nobody in the world will ever come to see me now! Why, I've just met that perfectly grand Lemuel Artichoke, and he is right around the corner, and he has just formed the habit of sort of dropping in every night, and it isn't!"

"Really, you amaze me, Tapoca," the complaisant father repeated her mildly. "Ever since your best friend, Margerite, moved over to the north side, I have heard nothing except the utterly grand location Margerite now lived in and how nice it was to feel oneself surrounded by one's own class, instead of living in such a hit-and-miss locality as this did. You said you were just ashamed to have the girls meet here for the card club, and it was so unprogressive never to move, and that when we did move and get in a decent place you were going to get an enameled bedroom set with the money grandfather sent you, and that you were just sick of this old place, anyway!"

"I am sure I never made any such remarks," his daughter told him firmly and aggressively. "You just imagined things! Of course I said I might like to move in time, but there is no sense rushing things and Lemuel gets home so late from his office that if I were on the north side he never in the world would come over!"

"I am sure I never made any such remarks," his daughter told him firmly and aggressively. "You just imagined things! Of course I said I might like to move in time, but there is no sense rushing things and Lemuel gets home so late from his office that if I were on the north side he never in the world would come over!"

"I am sure I never made any such remarks," his daughter told him firmly and aggressively. "You just imagined things! Of course I said I might like to move in time, but there is no sense rushing things and Lemuel gets home so late from his office that if I were on the north side he never in the world would come over!"

"I am sure I never made any such remarks," his daughter told him firmly and aggressively. "You just imagined things! Of course I said I might like to move in time, but there is no sense rushing things and Lemuel gets home so late from his office that if I were on the north side he never in the world would come over!"

"I am sure I never made any such remarks," his daughter told him firmly and aggressively. "You just imagined things! Of course I said I might like to move in time, but there is no sense rushing things and Lemuel gets home so late from his office that if I were on the north side he never in the world would come over!"

"I am sure I never made any such remarks," his daughter told him firmly and aggressively. "You just imagined things! Of course I said I might like to move in time, but there is no sense rushing things and Lemuel gets home so late from his office that if I were on the north side he never in the world would come over!"

"I am sure I never made any such remarks," his daughter told him firmly and aggressively. "You just imagined things! Of course I said I might like to move in time, but there is no sense rushing things and Lemuel gets home so late from his office that if I were on the north side he never in the world would come over!"

"I am sure I never made any such remarks," his daughter told him firmly and aggressively. "You just imagined things! Of course I said I might like to move in time, but there is no sense rushing things and Lemuel gets home so late from his office that if I were on the north side he never in the world would come over!"

"I am sure I never made any such remarks," his daughter told him firmly and aggressively. "You just imagined things! Of course I said I might like to move in time, but there is no sense rushing things and Lemuel gets home so late from his office that if I were on the north side he never in the world would come over!"

"I am sure I never made any such remarks," his daughter told him firmly and aggressively. "You just imagined things! Of course I said I might like to move in time, but there is no sense rushing things and Lemuel gets home so late from his office that if I were on the north side he never in the world would come over!"

WHAT THEY WANTED

"Well, your heart's desire is granted," the complaisant husband announced as he carved the steak. "I said this house today, Catalpa! I found a buyer who didn't mind at all that it is so big and such a care and who didn't seem to give a whoop for the servant question!"

"Holabird!" gasped the graceful wife, dropping her napkin and staring at him with distracted eyes. "Do you mean to say you have sold the house over our heads and that we are homeless? That this place isn't ours any longer?"

"I declare!" the complaisant husband declared in great surprise. "I thought when I broke the glad news you would burst into grateful tears and hurl yourself upon my neck! You've been saying three times a day for the last five years now! Why did we could get rid of this place, we could get along with two less bedrooms and then it was such a long old thing and you had to walk miles to get from the front room to the second floor and the kitchen."

"But you needn't have been so abrupt about it," the graceful wife said tremulously, fishing for her handkerchief. "You might have taken more time and let us think it over! Why, there are so many things to be considered! I think it is just awful of you to have done such a thing. Holabird! You never even telephoned!"

"Gee!" said the astounded small son. "Have we gotta move? What'll the baseball club do without me and I'm the captain and everything? An' I just got my workbench fixed up down in the basement!"

"I can't be hearing a thing," the complaisant father remarked, shaking his head at his child. "Only last Sunday you said 'Gee, wouldn't it be nice to live over on the north side next the park where Artie lives!'"

"I never heard anything more dreadful," the daughter of the house broke in tragically, having got her breath at last. "It does seem to me you might have considered the rest of the family a little bit instead of just yourself! Because you want to move is no reason for tearing us all up! Why, nobody in the world will ever come to see me now! Why, I've just met that perfectly grand Lemuel Artichoke, and he is right around the corner, and he has just formed the habit of sort of dropping in every night, and it isn't!"

"Really, you amaze me, Tapoca," the complaisant father repeated her mildly. "Ever since your best friend, Margerite, moved over to the north side, I have heard nothing except the utterly grand location Margerite now lived in and how nice it was to feel oneself surrounded by one's own class, instead of living in such a hit-and-miss locality as this did. You said you were just ashamed to have the girls meet here for the card club, and it was so unprogressive never to move, and that when we did move and get in a decent place you were going to get an enameled bedroom set with the money grandfather sent you, and that you were just sick of this old place, anyway!"

"I am sure I never made any such remarks," his daughter told him firmly and aggressively. "You just imagined things! Of course I said I might like to move in time, but there is no sense rushing things and Lemuel gets home so late from his office that if I were on the north side he never in the world would come over!"

"I am sure I never made any such remarks," his daughter told him firmly and aggressively. "You just imagined things! Of course I said I might like to move in time, but there is no sense rushing things and Lemuel gets home so late from his office that if I were on the north side he never in the world would come over!"

"I am sure I never made any such remarks," his daughter told him firmly and aggressively. "You just imagined things! Of course I said I might like to move in time, but there is no sense rushing things and Lemuel gets home so late from his office that if I were on the north side he never in the world would come over!"

"I am sure I never made any such remarks," his daughter told him firmly and aggressively. "You just imagined things! Of course I said I might like to move in time, but there is no sense rushing things and Lemuel gets home so late from his office that if I were on the north side he never in the world would come over!"

"I am sure I never made any such remarks," his daughter told him firmly and aggressively. "You just imagined things! Of course I said I might like to move in time, but there is no sense rushing things and Lemuel gets home so late from his office that if I were on the north side he never in the world would come over!"

"I am sure I never made any such remarks," his daughter told him firmly and aggressively. "You just imagined things! Of course I said I might like to move in time, but there is no sense rushing things and Lemuel gets home so late from his office that if I were on the north side he never in the world would come over!"

"I am sure I never made any such remarks," his daughter told him firmly and aggressively. "You just imagined things! Of course I said I might like to move in time, but there is no sense rushing things and Lemuel gets home so late from his office that if I were on the north side he never in the world would come over!"

"I am sure I never made any such remarks," his daughter told him firmly and aggressively. "You just imagined things! Of course I said I might like to move in time, but there is no sense rushing things and Lemuel gets home so late from his office that if I were on the north side he never in the world would come over!"

"I am sure I never made any such remarks," his daughter told him firmly and aggressively. "You just imagined things! Of course I said I might like to move in time, but there is no sense rushing things and Lemuel gets home so late from his office that if I were on the north side he never in the world would come over!"

"I am sure I never made any such remarks," his daughter told him firmly and aggressively. "You just imagined things! Of course I said I might like to move in time, but there is no sense rushing things and Lemuel gets home so late from his office that if I were on the north side he never in the world would come over!"

THE PORTEOUS & MITCHELL Co

A REMARKABLE SALE OF HOSIERY

It will begin today and continue throughout the week. These special offerings represent manufacturers' surplus stocks and close-outs from jobbers. The reductions are fully 25 to 33 1-3 per cent. This is a good time to lay in a supply of Hosiery at substantial savings.

On Sale Beginning Today

- Cashmere Hosiery, 35c
Infants' White Cashmere Hosiery, with silk heels and toes—Special price 35c a pair, value 50c.
- Sample Hosiery, 79c
Boys' and Girls' Three-quarter length Wool Hosiery, principally sizes 8 1-2, 9 and 9 1-2—Special price 79c a pair, values up to $1.50.
- Burson Hosiery, 29c
One case of Women's Burson Fashioned Hosiery, in black—Special price 29c a pair, value 48c.
- Burson Hosiery, 39c
Women's Burson Hosiery, black with white feet, also black with ribbed tops—Special price 39c a pair, value 50c.
- Fleeced Hosiery, 29c
One case of Women's Outsize Fleeced Hosiery, black only—Special price 29c a pair, value 39c.
- Extra Size, 39c
One case of Burson Extra Size Hosiery, in black—Special price 39c a pair, value 50c.
- Fibre Silk, 48c
One case of Women's Black Fibre Silk Hosiery, seam in the back—Special price 48c a pair, value 50c.
- Sport Hosiery, 48c
Women's and Misses' Mercorized Ribbed Sport Hosiery, black and nude color—Special price 48c a pair—value 50c.
- Sport Hosiery, 59c
Women's Sport Hosiery, heather mixtures, with silk clox—Special price 59c a pair, value 79c.
- Silk Mixed, 59c
Women's Silk Mixed Sport Hosiery, in a good variety of color combinations—Special price 59c a pair, sub standards of $1.00 grade.
- English Hosiery, $1.29
Women's English Wool Ribbed Sport Hosiery—our own importation—Special price $1.29 a pair, value $1.50.
- English Hosiery, $1.48
Women's English Wool Ribbed Sport Hosiery—our own importation—Special price $1.48 a pair, value $1.75.
- Silk and Wool, $1.48
Women's Silk and Wool Sport Hosiery, with hand silk, heather mixtures—Special price $1.48 a pair, value $1.75.
- Silk and Wool, $1.95
Women's Silk and Wool Sport Hosiery, with hand silk, heather mixtures—Special price $1.95, regular value $2.25.

Remember — This Is the Day of the One-Cent Sale of Quality Brand Aluminum Ware

SALE STARTS WHEN THE STORE OPENS
THIS MORNING AT 8:30 A. M.
COME EARLY! COME EARLY!

- Divided Into Three Price Groups:
AT 1c—An assortment of 24 useful articles, regular value 10c to 25c.
AT 49c—An assortment of 17 articles of general household utility, value 75c to $1.00.
AT 99c—An assortment of 23 articles in Aluminum Ware, value $1.50 to $2.50.

No telephone or mail orders—no pieces reserved—no C. O. D.
One Cent articles limited to one piece with each purchase of larger articles while they last.

EXTRAORDINARY VALUES IN WOMEN'S APPAREL

Suits — Coats — Dresses

ON SALE TODAY
All at $15.00

SUITS, AT $15.00
Women's Navy Point Twill Suits, 38-inch Coats, cut on straight lines—offered at less than cost to make — On sale today at $15.00, actual value $29.50.

COATS, AT $15.00
Women's Tweed Coats—only 15 Coats in this offering—of plaid back material, sizes 36 to 42—On sale today at $15.00. Early selection recommended.

DRESSES, AT $15.00
One rack of Women's Silk and Point-Twill Dresses — these dresses have been taken from our line of regular $25.00 dresses — Choose today at $15.00.

FUR-COLLARED COATS
$35.00 to $89.50
Remarkable values today, in Fur-Collared Coats. Of superlative materials, in styles for both women and misses, with handsome Fur Collars and Cuffs—a splendid range at $35.00 to $89.50 — every garment a special value.

THUMMS
HOME MADE
MAYONNAISE
and
RUSSIAN DRESSING
THUMMS DELICATESSEN
40 Franklin Street
Bulletin's Pattern Service

FOR YOUR BETTER HEALTH
"I advise every woman that suffers with indigestion to try FOLEY'S KIDNEY PILLS."
Mrs. E. J. FOLEY, of Cleveland, Ohio.
"I can thank FOLEY'S KIDNEY PILLS that I feel better, more energetic than I did for 15 years."
John F. FOLEY, of Cleveland, Ohio.
When suffering from Backache, Rheumatism, Lame Back, Kidney or Bladder, etc., try FOLEY'S KIDNEY PILLS.
Tonic in Action
Quick to Give Good Results

Dispenser of breakfast cheer-destroyer of the day's fatigue.
"Gee to the last drop"
WELL HOUSE
COFFEE
REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

